Context: The Magh Bihu is also called Bhogali Bihu, which is quintessentially the festival of food. The Magh Bihu marks the end of the harvesting season. The eve of the Magh Bihu is called the Uruka. It is the most gastronomical night of the year in Assam when family and friends get together and feasts around a bon fire. The next day is the main Magh Bihu. In the early morning, people take bath and burn the main 'Meji' built with bamboo and wood. People gather around the 'Meji' and pray to the Holy Fire by offering 'Maah Khorai' and 'Pithas.
